HARRY POWERS PLEADS NOT GUILTY

ALLEGED SLAYER OF FIVE ARRAIGNED ON FIVE INDICTMENTS

Trembles At Sight Of Crowd Gathered At Court House

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 14.—Harry F. Powers, the mail order Romeo, today stood before Judge John S. Southern in criminal court and pleaded not guilty to five first degree murder indictments.

The portly "Bluebeard," heavily surrounded by police and deputy sheriffs, was calm and unmoved as he made his pleas. The clerk of courts droned out in rapid succession the indictments charging him with the brutal deaths of Mrs. Asta Elcher, wealthy Park Ridge, Ill., widow, her three children, and Mrs. Dorothy Lempe, of Worcester, Mass.

Only after he was being whisked from the court room to his cell in the Harrison County Jail did Powers betray any emotion. He halted for a moment on the steps of the postoffice building, where the criminal courts are located, and surveyed the cordon of 200 police guarding the structure.

He looked out on the surly countenances of a huge crowd attracted to the building, and his lips trembled. With his manacled hands, Powers tried to grasp more tightly the silent deputies who bore him away.

Attorney J. Ed Law, Powers' counsel, asked Judge Southern to grant a change of venue. He argued that the mail order Romeo, who lured his victims to the murder garage in Quiet Dell, could never be given a fair trial with sentiment inflamed against him as it is.

Judge Southern refused the motion but said he would hear argument on the request sometime next week. He set the date for trial tentatively at December 7, providing the arguments on the venue appeal have been heard.

Prosecutor Will E. Morris briefly informed the judge that he would oppose any move to take the Powers trial out of Harrison County. He denied the allegations of Law and claimed that sentiment against the "Bluebeard" died down considerably since the attempt to lynch him recently.

Only about 150 persons were present in the small court room when Powers was arraigned. Judge Southern limited attendance to newspapermen and those necessary as representatives of the county.

YEGGS FOILED WHEN IRON SAFE RESISTS BURGLARY ATTEMPT

DeWine Feed Store Entered, Nothing Is Missing

Three reasons were advanced by police in explanation of the failure of amateur yeggs to obtain any financial reward for their efforts to crack an old-fashioned, iron safe in the office of a feed store on Washington St. conducted by Dennis A. DeWine, 138 Hill St., Friday night.

In the first place, after knocking the combination off the safe, an attempt to drive the mechanism back with a drift pin failed because the pin was too short.

Secondly, when the cracksmen used a chisel it stuck in the opening and would not budge either in or out.

Lastly, had the safe been opened, the intruders would have been disappointed because there was nothing of value there anyway.

Police Chief O. H. Cornwell, who made an investigation of the attempted robbery, urges the would-be thieves, whoever they may be, to communicate with him should they desire expert instructions on the best method of opening a safe of the type which defied their efforts.

Access to the office was gained through the west door, the glass being broken out after an attempt to "jimmy" the lock was unsuccessful.

DRY AGENT HELD

Declaring the slaying of Milford Smith, 20-year-old youth of Englewood, Colo., by a federal prohibition agent to be "without provocation or justification" District Attorney J. E. Stone of Arapahoe County has placed a murder charge against Henry Dierks, above, the agent, Dierks and the dead youth scuffled in a restaurant over three ounces of wine. Smith's skull was fractured.

COOPER CANDIDACY GIVEN IMPETUS ON VISIT TO COLUMBUS

Friends Urge Former Governor To Again Make Race

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—Former Governor Myers Y. Cooper's political bandwagon was racing down gubernatorial avenues at almost top speed today.

Nearly 100 people visited him at his hotel yesterday when he returned to the capital for a few hours, urging him to attempt a comeback in 1932.

"Large and influential groups," some of which formerly were lukewarm if not actually hostile, sent representatives to speak officially. Mr. Cooper's associates said they unanimously recommended that he seek the Republican nomination next year.

After the long series of conferences, Mr. Cooper, issued this terse statement to International News Service:

"Scores called at my suite, asking me to be an candidate, and while I had no announcement to make, I was manifestly pleased with the fine attitude shown toward my previous administration."

Asked when a formal announcement of his anticipated candidacy might be expected, he became evasive. He would not say whether the candidacy of David Ingalls, assistant secretary of the navy, in charge of aeronautics, has made any difference in his personal opinion of his chances in 1932, but neither would he admit that the Ingalls candidacy could "scare him out."

With him at all his conferences was former Finance Director Harry D. Silver, his intimate adviser in several political campaigns.

This fact was regarded as tremendously important among political dopesters, inasmuch as Silver, in a recent exclusive interview with International News Service, declared Cooper had definitely decided to be a candidate.

Giving further indication that he will be a candidate, Mr. Cooper said he will present some personal ideas of ways and means of solving the unemployment problem in an address to be given in Elyria next week.

His trip here, he said, "was on a business matter." The news spread that he was here, however, and he soon was swamped with calls.

Mr. Cooper said he was greatly surprised by the attention shown him by old political friends. He said most of the encouragement he received made a great impression on him "because it was given in an official way."

SAVED 12,500 PENNIES
LATHROP, Mo.—Beginning in 1917, when her brother gave her a new penny, Mrs. J. A. Lewis began saving all the pennies she received. Recently she purchased a walnut bedroom suit from the fund of 11,500 pennies thus accumulated, leaving a balance of 1,000 pennies.

PRESIDENT OFFERS BANKING SYSTEM TO "UNFREEZE" LOANS

Advances Method To Relieve Strained Finances

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—President Hoover today awaited the reaction of congress to his proposal to set up a system of home loan discount banks which could "unfreeze" some two billion dollars worth of home and farm mortgages now held by savings banks, building and loan associations, farm loan banks and deposit banks.

Although he has not yet canvassed the national legislators, who must enact the necessary laws for establishment of the system, the President was confident his plan would appeal to them. It was evolved after three months of consultation with representatives of the various groups granting credit on mortgage loans.

Generally, this latest move by Mr. Hoover to relieve the strained financial situation, which is retarding recovery from the economic depression, was hailed as a distinct contribution. Institutions throughout the country have been severely restricted, and in many cases pushed to the verge of ruin, as a result of the "frozen" mortgages they are holding against loans to small home owners and farmers, and their need for relief has been evident for some time.

Further, the proposed discount system would be permanent and designed to strengthen the whole home ownership set-up.

In the opinion of the President, considerable part of the unemployment is due to stagnation in residential construction, and he believes his plan will open new avenues of work for the jobless "in the most vital way."

As the executive outlined his scheme, a home loan discount bank would be established in each of the twelve federal reserve districts all to be under direction of a federal home loan board in Washington. He suggested the following regulatory measures:

"The capital of these discount banks shall be initially of minimum of five to thirty million as may be determined by the federal board upon the basis of the aggregate of such mortgage loans and probable needs of the particular district."

The proposed discount banks to make no initial or direct mortgages but to loan only upon the obligations of the loaning institutions secured by the mortgage loans as collateral so as to assure and expand the functioning of such institutions.

"Building and loan associations, savings banks, deposit banks, farm loan banks, etc., may become members of the system after they have satisfied the conditions of qualifications and eligibility that may be fixed by the federal board."

"The mortgage loans eligible for collateral shall not exceed $15,000 each and shall be limited to urban and farm property used for home purposes."

"The maximum amount to be advanced against the mortgage collateral not to exceed more than 50 per cent of the unpaid balance on unamortized and not more than 60 per cent of the unpaid balance of amortized long term mortgages."

INVALID PERISHES WHEN HOUSE BURNS

NEWELL, W. Va., Nov. 14.—While her son fought a losing battle to reach her side through a wall of flames, Mrs. Sarah E. Debee, 52, an invalid, was burned to death today when fire destroyed their home here.

Alonso Bailey, 30, son of the invalid attempted to rescue his mother but he was beaten back by the flames. He was seriously burned.

Eleanor Bosworth, 24, a daughter of the invalid woman, saved her own two-year-old daughter, Edith, and escaped from the house which was completely destroyed.

The fire was believed to have been caused by a faulty flue.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS TO DECLARE
ONE-YEAR ARMAMENT HOLIDAY

GENEVA, Nov. 14.—The League of Nations intends shortly to issue an official communique pronouncing a one-year armament holiday in effect throughout the world as of Nov. 1, 1931, International News Service learned today.

Nearly a score of nations have failed to return any reply to the appeal sent out by the League Council last September that they signify their willingness to enter an arms truce by Nov. 1.

ACCUSED OHIO BANK BANDIT FLEES JAIL AFTER SAWING BARS

IDENTIFY VICTIM

Mrs. Mary Stelmachowski, 22-year-old Chicago woman, believed by her husband and sister-in-law to have been the Crystal Lake, Ill., "grave" killing victim. They identified the undergarments found in the shallow grave as having belonged to Mrs. Stelmachowski.

DEFENDANT WINNER OF SLANDER ACTION DESPITE BLOOMERS

Testimony Hinged On Conduct Of Woman In Gym Classes

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 14.—Dr. William Knemoe, dentist, today stood exonerated of slandering Mrs. Ella Sonneborn, parish worker in his church, but the burning question of whether she once wore gym bloomers "which showed the flesh" remained as unanswered as the identity of the unknown soldier.

The bloomers were displayed to the jury yesterday, much to the boisterous merriment of spectators in the court, but despite Mrs. Sonneborn's contention that they were perfectly respectable, even for a widow with four children, she lost her suit, 9 to 3.

Mrs. Sonneborn, parish worker in charge of girls of the Immanuel Evangelical Church, had sued Knemoe for $50,000, charging that remarks he made about her caused her to lose her position.

On the stand, Knemoe testified that Mrs. Sonneborn wore bloomers "which showed the flesh, which showed the skin and her knees," and that once "she was trying to do a hand spring backward."

Only that, according to the testimony, but she and the girls once sang "Hail, Hail! The gang's all here. What the he—do we care?"

To this charge Mrs. Sonneborn replied that she and the girls were really singing "Hail, Hail! The gang's all here, in all kinds of weather, we all go together," and that no mention of Satan's domain was made.

Mrs. Sonneborn smiled her admission when it was testified that she "stuck out her tongue" at Knemoe at a meeting of the church board.

The jury's 9 to 3 verdict was reached in a few minutes.

TREASURY BALANCE
WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Treasury balance as of Nov. 12—$197,820,519.74. Expenditures $11,051,614.60. Customs receipts $11,266,870.56.

APPOINTMENTS COUNSEL
COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—Attorney General Gilbert Bellman today announced the appointment of Attorney Harrison L. McCarthy of Salem, as his local counsel to represent Ira J. Fulton, state banking superintendent, in connection with the liquidation of the affairs of the Citizens Savings Bank, of Salem.

The Martin girl was rushed to a hospital after the accident but was pronounced dead upon arrival at the hospital. Doctors C. O. Cramer, W. R. Gibson and C. S. McCafferty worked for an hour to save the life of the child, administering oxygen to bring life to its body.

WAGE CUTTING IS DECLARED VICIOUS

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Wage cutting by big industries is as unnecessary as it is vicious, Professor William H. Lierser of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, O., declared when he arrived here today to deliver a radio address on a nationwide hook-up tonight. He will speak over NBC at 8:30 Eastern time on "Effects of Depression On Employment and Wages" in a talk sponsored by the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education.

Industry depends too much on private and public charity to take care of its workers during depression and business will not become stabilized until reserves are set up to maintain wages similar to those provided for maintenance of property and incomes of investors, Lierser added.

Frank Circone Escapes From Marysville; Widely Sought

MARYSVILLE, O., Nov. 14.—With the defiant threat that he would "never again be taken alive," Frank Circone, 20, slippery bank robber suspect, had disappeared back into the shadows of the underworld today after sawing his way to liberty through the bars of the county jail last night.

Circone escaped, evidently with aid from outside sources, only a few hours after he had been implicated as a member of a daring holdup band that boasted among its accomplishments the $10,000 robbery of a bank at Richmond, O., and the sensational stick-up of the Gloucester post office recently.

Widespread search was started for Circone immediately after the discovery of his baffling escape from the county jail here.

Circone was named yesterday by Dan Fallon, 27, of Columbus, and Robert Hathaway, 30, of Philadelphia, as a member of the robbery gang that has engineered during recent weeks numerous holdups and robberies, including the daring stick-up of twenty-seven persons in a restaurant at Canton.

Fallon and Hathaway were arrested Thursday night in Wheeling, W. Va., by Columbus detectives and brought here where they allegedly confessed the series of robberies blamed upon them.

Circone was arrested in Columbus recently in connection with the Richmond bank robbery and was brought here to face charges of participating in the holdup. Before his arrest on the bank robbery charge, Circone had been held as a suspect in the Gloucester post office robbery.

COUPLE OF HEELS PUNCTURED

CLEVELAND, Nov. 14.—Two men, one a deaf mute, were shot and wounded, both of them in the heel, by different assailants in widely separated sections of the city here today, police reported.

Dr. Jesse Bridgeman shot Frank Letzest, a deaf mute, when he mistook his neighbor for a prowler. Letzest was one of three men who, Dr. Bridgeman told police, had parked their automobile in front of his home and were acting suspiciously.

When Letzest started to walk toward his home, Dr. Bridgeman challenged him and then fired at him when he failed to stop.

An unidentified man staged the other shooting in which George Davis, 42, suffered a heel wound. The man, interrupting a card game, entered the New Greece Coffee Shop and fired blindly at a group of four men sitting at a table.

INFANT SAVED AS MOTHER IS KILLED

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—A tiny baby girl was struggling for life in a hospital here today after miraculously being brought into the world by a caesarian operation last night fifteen minutes after her mother had died from injuries received when she was struck down by an automobile.

Three physicians were unable to save the life of the mother, Anna Martin, 16. She was struck down by a car driven by Mrs. Blanche Roberts, who was to report to police today for further questioning in connection with the accident.

The Martin girl was rushed to a hospital after the accident but was pronounced dead upon arrival at the hospital. Doctors C. O. Cramer, W. R. Gibson and C. S. McCafferty worked for an hour to save the life of the child, administering oxygen to bring life to its body.

COURT SMOOTHS GYPSY ROMANCE

Gypsy love troubles which flared in Cincinnati, O., as Romany tribesmen encamped there, have been smoothed by a decree of federal court holding that Ruby Ranco Marks, 14, and "Prince" Ephraim Marks, 25, both above are really husband and wife and that the bride was not kidnapped by her gypsy husband. Ruby's father, Frank Ranco, of Brooklyn, N. Y., traced the band across five states and had Marks arrested in Cincinnati, on a kidnapping charge. Marks is said to have paid $2,250 for his young bride.

ONE KILLED IN POLICE CHASE

Girl Dead When Auto Is Wrecked

CLEVELAND, Nov. 14.—One girl was killed, another seriously hurt and their two men companions were injured in an automobile accident here today which occurred while they fled from a police radio cruiser, police said.

The victim was Helen Wood, 23. She died at Lakewood Hospital where all four were taken for treatment, a short time after the crash. Ruby Schwartz, suffering a fractured skull and other injuries, was in a critical condition at the hospital.

Their two companions, James Madden and Horace Heffelfinger, 20, also were injured. All three of the injured persons were expected to recover, attaches at the hospital said.

Police chasing the quartet said the crash occurred when the automobile, traveling at a high rate of speed, failed to negotiate a right hand turn at the intersection. The cruiser started chasing the automobile when they saw it crash a red traffic light at high speed, police said.

SENATOR'S WIDOW WILL SUCCEED HIM

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 14.—Temporarily appointed to fill the vacancy created by the death of her husband, and with every prospect of being chosen at a special election in January to fill the unexpired term, Mrs. Hattie Caraway will go to senate next month prepared to carry on the work of the late Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway.

The appointment of Mrs. Caraway met the approval of Democratic leaders many of whom urged Gov. Parnell, after Senator Caraway's death, to appoint her.

That the state Democratic central committee at its meeting December 5 to nominate a candidate for the January election will select Mrs. Caraway, is a foregone conclusion. The nomination is equivalent to election.

The new junior senator from Arkansas—the distinction of serving to enjoy the distinction of serving in the upper house of congress—at her home in Jonesboro today, declined to make a statement "until later."

SKY FIRE-WORKS WILL BE VISIBLE

CINCINNATI, Nov. 14.—Celestial fireworks will be observed tonight when the yearly display of the Leonid meteors begin a four-night pyrotechnic performance.

Astronomers both at the observatory here and at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware will study the display.

Scientists described the show as "that constant succession of fireballs resembling rockets radiating in all directions from a point in the heavens" in the constellation Leo.

The Leonids become visible when the earth crosses their orbit, an ellipse of 1,900,000 miles, which takes them more than thirty-three and one-half years to describe around the sun.

ORDER RETIREMENT FROM BATTLE FRONT OF CHINESE FORCES

Dawes Submits Plan For Solution Of Crisis
To Briand

By International News Service
Reiterating Japan's refusal to evacuate Manchuria by November 16 as demanded by the League of Nations council, Japanese military authorities delivered an ultimatum today to the Chinese General Ma Chan-Shan, demanding his retirement from Tsitsihar and cessation of Chinese army activities along the Taonan Railway by November 20.

In messages to Peking, Ma Chan-Shan preceded early Japanese invasion of Anganki and Tsitsihar, while Shanghai dispatches to International News Service reported a Japanese army of 1,800 men crossing the Nonni River and launching a new attack upon the Chinese forces.

Guerrilla warfare was under way along the Nonni River front, with a decisive battle for possession of Anganki expected shortly.

In Paris, United States Ambassador Charles G. Dawes conferred with Foreign Minister Aristide Briand. He was reported to have presented a plan for peaceful solution of the crisis which will be discussed at the League of Nations Council meeting on Monday.

MONEY HOARDING IS CHECKED AS PUBLIC CONFIDENCE GAINS

Business Is Showing Encouragement Is Indicated

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Another week of fairly encouraging business and financial developments was indicated today by an examination of the various statistical reports issued by the government during the past seven days.

Money hoarding, in the opinion of experts, has been checked definitely, due to renewed confidence in the banking structure of the country. Money in circulation, November 11 totaled $5,517,000,000 and while $1,040,000,000 ahead of the same time a year ago, showed an increase of $26,000,000 during the week.

Experts said that this indicated that money circulations for the past two weeks have been more nearly normal than at anytime for several months. There was a sharp rise at the end of October, but this was a seasonal tendency, just as was the decrease for the early November period.

Under normal circumstances money circulation would increase from now until the last shopping day before Christmas, in the amount of about $300,000,000. Some increases no doubt will take place this year, as it cannot be anticipated that there will be any rush in the return of money from hoarding, but the gain is not expected to be as great as in normal years.

For the second successive week the gold reserves of the country increased, the total November 11 having been $4,346,000,000. This was $203,000,000 less than the year before, but entirely adequate to meet the credit needs of the country.

Coincident with the increase in gold and decline in money circulation, the outstanding credit of the Reserve Bank, November 11 showed a decline of $45,000,000 for the week, the total having been $2,064,000,000.

Commerce department reports showed appreciably better conditions and considerable restoration of confidence in a majority of thirty principal cities. Among the most encouraging factors were increases of some raw materials including wheat, oil and cotton, contributing to large purchasing power in large areas, and gains in steel production.

Automobile plants were preparing to start production on new fall models, which should increase employment.

Reports of the President's organization for unemployment relief indicated that the community chest drives and other methods of obtaining funds for the winter work will be a success in most cities, reducing suffering to the minimum.

Committees for the organization received pledges of cooperation from many important civic, commercial, patriotic and religious bodies of the country.

The treasury virtually had completed its recommendations to President Hoover relative to possible increases in taxation, announcement of which will clear away much uncertainty and in the opinion of some observers, have a wholesome effect.

STATE TAKES LIVES OF CONVICTED MEN

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—The crude-looking, straight-backed wooden electric chair in the gray, drab little "death chamber" at the Ohio Penitentiary claimed two more victims today and the state had avenged the cold-blooded murder of Sheriff George Davenport of Crawford County, with the lives of two Negroes, Blanton Ralls, 19, and his uncle, Walter Ralls, 22.

To the last, the two Negroes asserted their innocence of the crime for which they were condemned to die. Walter Ralls maintained his innocence until the twenty-third Psalm upon his lips after leaving a written statement that "false witnesses did rise up against me."

Each of the Negroes shook hands with several of their acquaintances who had come to witness the execution. Blanton, "prepared to meet his God," he said, wished everyone present "good luck."

TELLING the WORLD'S NEWS with PICTURES

AND NOW—SENOR UZCUDUN, THE GREAT FILM LOVER!

Caramba, it cannot be! But yes! Senor Paulino Uzcudun, the mator of maul, the picador of pugilism, the gay caballero of clout, has gone—alas!—movie! In Orangeburg, N. Y., the battle-scarred Basque plays hero, no less, to the heroine, Senorita Catalino Barcena, as the all-seeing camera records the thrilling story for waiting Spanish movie-goers. In scene one, La Barcena, shows Paulino how to make-up. Scene two, the beauteous Catalino pleads with Uzcudun to knock the ears off that old meany, his movie opponent, "for me, carissima mia!"

The Power of Modern Make-Up Answers Gandhi

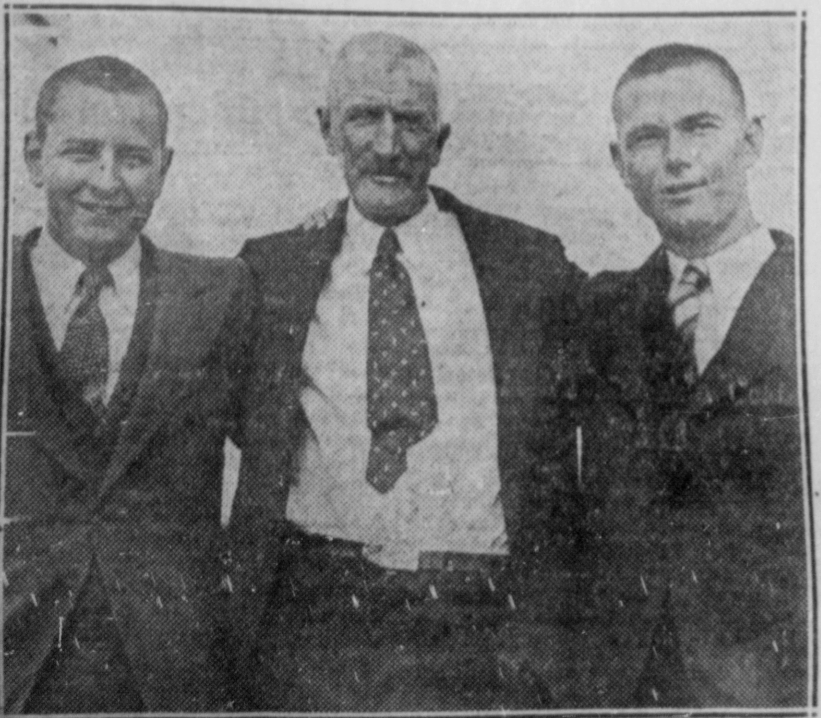

Here's an almost startling example of what modern stagecraft can accomplish when it comes to makeup for the stage or screen. The beautiful young woman at the left is Mae Marsh, heroine of any number of feature pictures in the old days. At right is Miss Marsh in makeup for the part of an elderly mother. Note the astonishing effect of wrinkles and slightly drooping mouth.

Two Beauties in One Family

Although Marlene Dietrich, famous German and American film star, has undisputed claims to beauty, she hasn't any exclusive right to it in her own family. Out of hundreds of portraits that have been made of her, the vampish actress likes this one, in which she shares honors with her daughter, Maria Selber, as the best. It is the latest one taken, too, and doesn't leave much for which to ask.

"Crusoes" Back Home Again

Paul Stachwick, Elmer Palliser and Gordon Brawner (left to right) are pictured on the S. S. Virginia on their arrival at New York, near the end of their journey back home after their rescue by the U. S. S. Sacramento from the Cocos Island. The trio lived like Robinson Crusoes for six months after their little yawl was wrecked, subsisting on fish, coconuts and wild pig.

Redman, (above) president-elect of the American Chemical society, whose studies in industrial research have brought him the Grassall medal award of the American section of the British Society of Chemical Industry. In his address of acceptance, Dr. Redman declared at New York that creative science would lead in the conquest and that it is the answer to Gandhi and his theories.

Spirit of Fascism

Each new recruit to Fascism will henceforth receive a medal bearing the likeness of this beautiful Milanese girl, Signorina Yolanda Lavazzari. Her fine features and classic beauty are believed to represent the spirit of Fascism. The Black Shirts ought to experience a rapid growth with her likeness on recruits' medals.

Dies in Crash

Lieut.-Commander Oscar W. Erickson (above) was killed when his plane crashed over the side of the airplane carrier Saratoga, near Point Loma, Calif. This is the first casualty resulting from a landing on one of the U. S. Navy's aircraft carriers. Erickson died from injuries and the effects of submersion. George Cumming, a pilot, who was a passenger in the plane, was not injured.

Trunk Slayer as a Child

As a little girl with curls, Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, confessed trunk slayer, of Phoenix, Ariz., is shown in the bosom of her family when they made their modest home in Danville, Ill. Her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Harvey J. McKinnell, are shown with Winnie Ruth and her brother, Burton, who admitted to Los Angeles authorities that his sister tried to get him to assist her with the trunks which contained the bodies of her victims.

Dared Royal Wrath to Wed

Prince Nicholas of Rumania, brother of King Carol, is pictured enjoying a stein of beer with the divorced commoner, Mme. Jana Lucia Deletj, whom he has since married, although Carol ordered him not to do so. Defying his brother's royal command, Prince Nicholas eloped to a small town near Bucharest and compelled the mayor to tie the knot.

Screen to Hearth

Once one of the foremost actresses of the motion picture world, Dorothy Dalton is now a home-loving mother and wife. Her husband is Arthur Hammerstein, noted theatrical impresario, and they make their home at Great Neck, L. I. Dragged to Chair

Perhaps you didn't know ancient tradition provides that this dignified Speaker of the British House of Commons has to be forcibly propelled to his official chair by the two members who nominated him for the honor. This custom is a survival of a time when the duties of Speaker were so arduous that a man had to be forcibly inducted into the position. Captain Edward Algernon Fitz Roy (above) is the newly-elected Speaker and, as usual, he was dragged to his seat as one of the first steps in organizing the new House.

Completes Cycle

Ray Long (above), mentor of many a successful author and now head of his own publishing house, has completed the literary cycle by becoming an author himself. His first book, "An Editor Looks at Russia," is based on a six weeks' visit to the Soviet Union last year.

COUPLE'S MARRIAGE

ANNOUNCED AT PARTY.
Announcement of the marriage of Miss Mary Heaton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Heaton, S. Detroit St., to Mr. Joseph Murphy, Cincinnati, was made in a clever contest at a party entertained by Mrs. Murphy's sister, Mrs. Carlton Anderson, S. Detroit St., Friday evening. The couple was married in Newport, Ky., October 2, and had kept the event a secret.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy are residing for the present with the bride's parents. Mr. Murphy was formerly of Troy but is employed by the Pennsylvania Oil Co. in Cincinnati. He is a brother of Mrs. Lyman Collins, this city. Mrs. Murphy has been employed as a stenographer by the Hoover and Allison Co.

Guests at the party entertained by Mrs. Anderson Friday evening were members of the Searchlight Class of the Friends Church. An informal time was enjoyed and later a salad course was served by Mrs. Anderson.

U. at the home of Mrs. A. E. Beam, Union Road, Thursday. A business session was held in the morning and a covered dish luncheon was enjoyed at noon.

Preceding the two addresses Mrs. Frank Wolf Sr. conducted a devotional period. Mrs. Herman Davis was in charge of the program. Twenty members attended the meeting.

AID SOCIETY SEWS ON FRIDAY.

An all day sewing party was enjoyed by members of the Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church at the home of Mrs. H. E. Kiernan, W. Second St., Friday. The women made several garments for McKinley P. T. A. through the Red Cross chapter.

A covered dish luncheon was served at noon and Mrs. Kiernan was assisted by Mrs. Walter South, Mrs. W. A. Meikle, Cincinnati, former Xenian, was guest at the meeting.

MUSIC CLUB TO PRESENT PROGRAM OF CHURCH MUSIC.

A recital of church music will be presented by members of the Xenia Woman's Music Club at the Presbyterian Church, Market and King Sts., Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The meeting is open to the public and all interested persons are invited. A silver offering will be taken.

The program will consist of choruses, trios, double trios, solos and duets, organ and piano numbers, organ, piano, violin and cello ensemble and organ duet.

CHILDREN ENJOY PARTY FRIDAY.

Bobby Jo Babb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Babb, N. Galloway St., entertained a group of her classmates of the second grade at McKinley School at her home after school Friday afternoon. The children enjoyed games and later refreshments were served.

The Xenia Sunshine Society will hold an all day meeting at the home of Mrs. David Lewis, E. Second St., Tuesday. Members are asked to bring a covered dish for the noon luncheon and are also asked to come prepared to sew. Election of officers will feature the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hansing, Indianapolis, Ind., left for their home Friday after a visit with Mrs. Laura Donthett, High St., and Miss Carnes, Yellow Springs.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First M. E. Church will meet at the home of Mrs. C. L. Spencer, W. Third St., Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. "Guest Day" will be observed and each member is invited to bring a guest.

Mrs. O. E. Bradfute, N. King St., was removed home Thursday from Espey Hospital where she underwent medical treatment several weeks.

Officers and guards of Obedient Council, No. 160, D. of A., who recently took part in memorial services are asked to wear their white dresses Tuesday evening when the charter will be draped in memory of Miss Lucy Pope. This service will precede the regular lodge meeting at 7:30 p. m.

Mrs. J. T. Charters, of the First M. E. Church and Mrs. J. J. Stout, of Trinity M. E. Church, attended an all day meeting of officers of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Hillsboro district of the M. E. Church in Blanchester Friday.

Women of the Service Class of the Second U. P. Church will hold a sewing party at the home of Mrs. John Van Eaton, N. King St., Tuesday. A covered dish luncheon will be served at noon.

Prof. Morris Neuberg, of Wittenberg College, Springfield, will be guest speaker at the P. T. A. dinner at Central High School Monday evening honoring the teachers of the school. Prof. Neuberg is widely known as an authority on child psychology. Mrs. Charles Tindall and Miss Faye Cavanaugh are making plans for the dinner.

Miss Minnie Haninger, S. Detroit St., left Saturday morning for El Paso, Tex., and Biebee, Ariz., where she will spend the winter.

The Junior Woman's Club will meet Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with Mrs. A. C. Messenger at the O. S. and S. O. Home.

Mrs. John Ary, S. Monroe St., who has been seriously ill following a cerebral hemorrhage, was reported to be slightly improved Saturday.

A final rehearsal of the Woman's Music Club Chorus will be held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Presbyterian Church, Market and King Sts.

Group D. Mrs. J. J. Stout, leader, of the Ladies Aid Society of Trinity M. E. Church, will hold a sewing party at the home of Mrs. Paul Turnbull, S. Detroit St., Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Members are asked to bring suggestions for raising money for the society this year and a prize will be given the member submitting the best suggestion.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

THE BIG FACT in the business of producing eggs for eating purposes is just one thing—that nature encourages a hen to lay eggs in the late winter and spring, and eggs lay in the fall and early winter.

The whole science of poultry management for egg production lies in getting around and nullifying these natural laws—not so much to stop egg laying in spring, but to get the feathered ladies to keep laying when fresh eggs are scarce and high priced.

From the standpoint of the average city consumer, the problem was largely solved when the cold storage warehouse came into common use. Millions and millions of eggs go into storage in the spring, and come out again in the late summer and autumn, when fresh eggs are not obtainable at low prices. It is a good system. The storage eggs—polished known in the trade as "refrigerators"—may not have quite the same fresh, mild flavor, but they are just as good food, and they are cheap.

Fussy consumers, however, want fresh eggs that are fresh and taste fresh. And thereby they support the highly-developed and normally profitable henry business which operates on factory methods, and whose product commands the highest price on all big markets.

Rightly considered, a "henry" henry fancy selected first egg is a thing of beauty and a triumph of science and art. It is of a certain unvarying size, color and weight, absolutely clean, to shell, and often not more than twenty-four hours old. Its yolk is of a certain rich yellow, held in place by the strong membranes, its white just thick enough and not too thick, the tiny air cell at one end just the right size.

The hen that laid the egg is an aristocrat, probably a trim white Leghorn. She lives indoors—probably has never touched her feet to the bare ground in her life. She is fed an astounding selection of good foods, and most likely has them all in separate feeding hoppers, so that she can eat all she wants at her. She lives as much as possible in direct sunlight, or if that is not enough she gets a daily ration of cod liver oil, containing the precious "Vitamin D."

Beyond all that, our hen is kept awake till late in the evening and aroused before daybreak by electric lights, so that she may have more time to eat, and so have materials for more eggs.

Indeed, if her owner is strictly up to the minute, she may be under electric lights all night long. That is surely we have progressed a long way from the happy-go-lucky farm flock of two generations ago.

Trunk Witness

Evelyn Nace (above), a physician's secretary at Phoenix, Ariz., is believed to have been the last person to see Hedvig Samuelson and Agnes Leroy, trunk murder victims, alive. Miss Nace dined with the two girls who were slain by Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, according to her confession, on the night of Oct. 17, just before the tragedy occurred.

Women of the Service Class of the Second U. P. Church will hold a sewing party at the home of Mrs. John Van Eaton, N. King St., Tuesday. A covered dish luncheon will be served at noon.

GOING AROUND IN WASHINGTON

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—When the President of the United States travels there are two big attractions in his party. The Chief Executive, of course, comes first. But second only to him in the public eye is Colonel Edward W. Starling, presidential secret service guard.

Majestic in appearance, tall and straight as an arrow, the embodiment of competence and courage, Starling counts his friends and acquaintances in the thousands. All over the land he is known to the prominent and the lowly and esteemed by everyone.

In 1927, after a summer as the boon companion and personal guard of President Coolidge in the Black Hills, enthusiastic South Dakota named a peak after him, Mount Starling. Only the former President received a higher honor, an entire range of hills being named after him.

Starling's particular duty as a member of the White House Secret Service staff is to arrange for the security and comfort of the President when he leaves the Capital. During the Coolidge regime, when the former President spent the summer away from Washington, Starling personally visited the various resorts and homes offered the President and reported on their availability.

Starling is known as the man who "taught" Coolidge how to play. He taught him fly casting, introduced him into the mysteries of clay pigeon shooting, and was his constant companion on the walks that the former President took as his form of daily exercise.

Coolidge and Starling would leave the White House before breakfast for an early constitutional and several times a week the President would invite him in for hot cakes and coffee afterwards. The two men would dine alone, talking over fishing incidents, or the President would listen to Starling tell about his Kentucky farm.

When arranging for the President's reception in a city Starling takes complete charge of police and detective forces. He goes over the route of march that the President will take, provides for the transportation and accommodation of the

CHILDREN'S BOOK OBSERVANCE PLAN OF LOCAL LIBRARY

The Greene County District Library will participate in the observance of Children's Book Week during the coming week during which libraries and book stores throughout the nation will have special displays of children's books in an effort to interest children in good reading.

There will be a story hour for children of all ages every afternoon at 4 o'clock in the children's room of the public library here. The stories will be told from the doorstep of the "Book House" which is being set up in the children's room. The "Book House" is made of books and holds all the book secrets dear to the hearts of children.

Another feature of the week will be a ballot box where children may register their vote for their favorite book. There will be a box for boys and one for girls and the ten titles receiving the most votes in each group will be announced at the end of the week. The voting will begin when the library opens Monday morning and continue throughout the week, Miss Katherine Shorey, librarian, announces.

Parents are urged to participate in observance of the week by having their children see the "Book House" and having them attend at least one of the story hour periods. "Good reading is essential to good citizenship and if reading habits are formed early in youth the chances for a happy and useful manhood and womanhood are increased ten fold," Miss Shorey says in making plans for the observance here.

COMMUNITY CHEST GETS ENDORSEMENT

Xenia's fourth annual Community Chest drive to be conducted November 17 to 24 had the endorsement Saturday of the Xenia Ministerial Association. The ministers gave the campaign their approval at a meeting Friday afternoon, and the resolution adopted urges every resident in the city to consider the value of giving generously on account of the greater need for funds for relief work.

entire Presidential party, and if the President is to deliver an address, that the hall and other facilities are in readiness.

It was Starling who devised the convenient stand that President Hoover uses for his notes when he makes a public speech. Because of his long experience, his ability in handling men, and his agreeable Southern personality local leaders willingly turn arrangements for the President's reception over to him.

Starling is a Kentuckian, of a mountain stock. His family's history in the state dates back to early pioneer days there. His plantation lies in the blue-grass lands and is managed by his brother. Each Spring Starling goes home during plowing time and lends a hand in sowing crops. In the fall, after the harvest, he distributes among his friends home-cured hams and home grown tobacco.

His title of Colonel, by which he is widely known, is an honorary one. He served in the army during the Spanish-American War, but not as an officer. Several years ago in recognition of his popularity a Kentucky governor made him a member of his staff, and Starling became one of that legion of worthy men known as "Kentucky Colonels."

Before joining the Secret Service Starling was a sheriff in Kentucky and state police officer. He has been a member of the White House Secret Service staff for fifteen years. He is a bachelor and insists that he will continue in that state.

XENIA AND GREENE COUNTY OBITUARY, FUNERAL NOTICES

MISS ANNA CONSIDINE.
Miss Anna Margaret Considine, Payette St., died at her home Friday evening at 7:20 o'clock. She had been an invalid forty years and her condition had been serious the past month. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

Miss Considine was born in Xenia and was a member of a pioneer Xenia family. She is survived by a sister, Miss Catherine Considine, with whom she made her home and a brother, Patrick Considine, Cincinnati. A brother, James Considine, and a sister, Mrs. Bridget McKenna, preceded her in death. She was a member of St. Bridget Church.

Funeral services will be held at St. Bridget Church Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock with burial in St. Bridget Cemetery.

MRS. HANBACH.
Mrs. Dorothea Irma Hanbach, 22, wife of Harold Hanbach, 5 Rubicon Apts., Dayton, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin C. Pratt, also of Dayton, died at St. Ann's Hospital Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Hanbach was born in Dayton June 14, 1909. She is survived by her husband, an infant daughter, Nancy Lou, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pratt, 530 St. Nicholas Ave., Dayton. Her father is a native of Spring Valley.

Funeral services will be held at the home of her parents Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be made in Spring Valley Cemetery.

ARNOLD W. DREWES.
Arnold W. Drewes, former principal of Bath Twp. High School, died at General Hospital, Portsmouth, O., Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Death was caused by pneumonia which resulted from shock following an accident Sunday.

Mr. Drewes was struck while crossing a street in New Boston where he was principal of the high school. He received a fractured skull, nine broken ribs and a scalp wound. He was principal of the Osborn school in 1927. His sister, Miss Lorena Drewes, is a teacher of Bath Twp. Junior High School.

Funeral services will be held in Napoleon, O., Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock and burial will be made there. Short services were held in New Boston Friday.

"FOUR HUNDRED" FIGURES

Social Leaders of New York and Nation as Seen by Ethelda Bedford, Gazette Staff Writer

By ETHELDA BEDFORD
Author of "Dear Diary"
NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—No figure in society has had greater influence over What The Smart Sports Woman Should Wear than the stunning and, yes, beautiful, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney.

Yet a mannequin in a Paris shop could not wear street and party attire more fetchingly.

Tall, with dark brown hair, with a natural wave, large wistful eyes, full, shapely lips and finely designed features, Mrs. Whitney never goes unnoticed whether she is in a crowded ball room or at a roaring race track.

Familiar Track Figure
She has long been one of the most familiar figures at fashionable race tracks, being one of the outstanding horsewomen of social circles, and a member of the Radnor Hunt club, of Philadelphia.

Few have received the attention that Mrs. Whitney was given as the beautiful Gwendolyn Crosby Hopkins, daughter of Mrs. Stevens Heckscher, of Philadelphia and Stratford, Pa., and the late Mark Hopkins, Jr., of Boston.

She is the granddaughter of Mrs. L. G. Crosby, of New York, and a niece of the Marquis de Polignac, of Paris, so well remembered as Nina Crosby.

She always has had an individual wardrobe. Her riding habits have ever been the last gallop in fabric and design. And even before you knew titled hats were to be worn on bridal paths, the lovely Mrs. Whitney was wearing one.

Her husband, known to his numerous friends as "Sonny," an internationally known follower of the turf, inherited one of the finest racing stables in the country from his late father, Harry Payne Whitney. It was this mutual love of the turf which helped bring about the romance between "Sonny" and the lovely Miss Hopkins.

She surprised the few close friends and relatives who were fortunate enough to be invited to their wedding by wearing a pale seafoam panne velvet, cut on simple lines, sheath-like, close over the hips and trailing the floor, instead of the conventional white.

The ceremony took place in the luxurious estate of her mother, "Greenwood Farm." It might have been one of the most pretentious, but everyone was surprised by its simplicity.

Mrs. Whitney presides as one of New York's great ladies with the grace and utter ease which only comes with generations of cultural environment.

She never seems to try to play the part of a "great lady." She has the admirable confidence of knowing she is, a great lady, and therefore does not feel obliged to make a point of it either in word or manner.

CANDIDATE SEEKS BALLOT RECOUNT

On application of J. E. Lewis, who was defeated for reelection the Greene County board of elections faced the task Saturday afternoon of making a recount of votes cast for two of the three candidates for Ross Twp. School board at the recent election.

Ernest Long, incumbent, was re-elected without dispute when he received 287 votes. The official count also indicated W. J. Frame had been elected to the other vacancy on the board by a margin of four votes over Lewis, whose term expired with that of Long, and who sought reelection. The official tabulation gave Frame 139 votes and Lewis, 135.

MINISTERS FAVOR PLANS FOR GUARD

Virgil Martin addressed the Xenia Ministerial Association on the proposed reorganization of Company L, National Guard, at a meeting Friday, indicating its value from national patriotic and community aspects.

The speaker stressed the plan to reorganize on a high moral basis. The association listened with interest to the discussion and looked with favor upon the proposed high moral basis of the reorganization of the unit, it was announced.

PAROLE VIOLATORS MUST SERVE TERMS IN STATE PRISON

Adjudged guilty of parole violations, Arthur Vance, 24, of W. Second St., and Virgil Hamilton, 20, of Cottage Grove Ave., were each sentenced to terms of one to fifteen years in the Mansfield state reformatory by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy Saturday.

Hamilton was paroled by Judge Gowdy last February 20 after pleading guilty to an indictment for burglary and larceny in connection with the theft of two buckets of candy from a truck in the garage of The Eavey Co., Detroit and Third Sts., December 16, 1930.

Vance, also indicted for burglary and larceny, received a suspended sentence and was paroled by Judge Gowdy last April 18. Sought for participation in an unsuccessful raid on a poultry house on the farm of Charles Forsythe, Lower Bellbrook Pike, January 27, Vance evaded arrest for two months, then surrendered to authorities.

Paroles of both men were revoked by Judge Gowdy after Vance was recently fined $50 and costs in Municipal Court for disorderly conduct, and Hamilton drew a fine of $25 and costs and thirty-day jail sentence for petit larceny in the same court.

Whom Do You Think You're Fooling When You Cut Down "Expenses"?

LOOK at it selfishly. Look at it altruistically. The story is the same. When you who are employed begin "cutting down," stinting, hoarding, you are holding back Prosperity. For yourself, as well as for others. Try as you might, you cannot isolate your fortunes from the fortunes of your community, or your country. If America is prosperous, Americans are prosperous, and you are prosperous.

When, however, you begin Buying Normally again, your neighbors will see the wisdom of your course, and follow suit. The impulse to buy gathers momentum. Every purchase leads to further purchases. And when your neighbors buy, and their neighbors buy, Prosperity will be well on its way.

Promises are not all for the future. Benefits received through Normal Buying are not all deferred benefits. They are as immediate as you want to make them. For by Buying Normally, you will buy at prices that are spectacularly low. You will find that you can afford luxuries that were once out of reach. You owe it to yourself and others to resume Normal Buying.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer gifts and sacrifice for sins. — Hebrews, v. 1.

BUSINESS DIFFERENT

The king business obviously is not what it used to be. The newly elected Speaker of the British House of Commons had to be dragged to his official chair by main force, a bit of stageplay that dates back to the time when members of the Commons hesitated to accept the Speakership for fear of losing the royal favor and their heads with it; but there was no stageplay about George Lansbury's impassioned criticism of the Speech from the Throne on Tuesday.

Waving a copy of the document, which had just been read to the Commons by George V., "by the Grace of God of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India," the leader of the Labor opposition shouted: "This innocuous document, known as the King's Speech is full of emptiness from beginning to end." That would have cost Lansbury his head a few centuries ago; but then, kings wrote their own speeches, if any. Speeches from the Throne are now written by the Prime Minister and his colleagues and handed to the King to read at the opening and prorogation of Parliament. Criticism of them, therefore, aims at the Government and not at the Crown.

The Royal Family of Great Britain has retained the affection of the conservative British people while the occupants of other thrones have been scurrying to cover. Government without a King is as inconceivable to our British cousins as a session of Parliament without the mace on the table. Sovereign and mace are symbols. The people rule. They do that in every civilized monarchy today where dictators have not intervened and replaced the king business with benevolent despotisms.

ROYAL ROMANCE

Carol of Rumania strove to prevent his brother Nicholas from marrying a beautiful girl of less than regal rank. So Nicholas and Jana burned up 125 miles of road to a small Rumanian village and compelled the mayor to marry them. Whereupon Carol ordered the records of the marriage destroyed and the Government issued a denial that it had taken place.

There's no one so pure as the reformed rake. Carol abandoned his royal wife and son and gave up his throne (for a time) to live out of Rumania with a titian-haired paramour. When his brother wanted to marry for love it was a horse of another color. Considerations of state did not interfere with his pleasure. They must with Nicholas' marital affairs. The latter's determination to give himself to the woman he loved will be more widely applauded outside of Rumania than will be the spleen displayed by a brother whose own love affairs were far more offensive in the eyes of the world.

FOR PROTECTION

The unusual precautionary measures being planned in order to protect Sig. Grandi when he lands in New York will not constitute the sort of welcome the people of the United States like to give a distinguished guest who has been invited to these shores. But the Italian foreign minister has traveled abroad before, and has had experience with the demonstrative ways and emotional outbursts of fellow Italians living beyond the Alps who are hostile to the Fascist regime. He will understand perfectly the reason for the measures taken in his behalf, and will comprehend the sense of responsibility the Government in Washington feels.

The need for the precautions will be the greater, too, because Sig. Grandi is something more even than minister of foreign affairs for Mussolini. As much as any person, except Il Duce himself, Grandi is an embodiment of Fascism, and he is widely considered in the line of succession to the dictatorship. Consequently he is a shining natural target for clamors and possible attacks by all of his countrymen who are out of accord with the present regime in the Peninsula.

Of course it is to be hoped that the hot heads among the anti-Fascists in this country will restrain themselves while Sig. Grandi is here, and that the measures to guard him that are taken will prove to have been unnecessary. As residents and, in many instances, as citizens of the United States they owe that much courtesy to this country regardless of how they may feel toward Fascism and its representatives. They should understand, too, that Americans are inclined to resent the actions of those who, coming from abroad, undertake to continue their private quarrels after reaching here.

The Rumanian Carol is not altogether of the Christmas variety.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—Conventions and their exhibits usually are dull affairs. But the hotel men, who have been meeting in New York have some new wrinkles.

They put on exhibit, for example, a window sash that not only actually keeps out noise but filters incoming air.

That, however, is not so magical as the self-opening door. When a waiter passes a certain electric light, service doors to or from the kitchen swing open automatically—thus saving dishes.

Anybody who has tried to get all the grit out of spinach will appreciate the spinach washer. Three-fourths of a bushel of spinach can be washed in a minute—and nobody gets his hands wet.

A bushel of potatoes can be pared in a minute. When the machine has done its work it shuts itself off automatically.

And the pounding of steak is too old-fashioned to be discussed. Steak now is cut into three-quarter-inch squares, not quite through. A thin film of meat is left uncut on the bottom, holding it in one piece.

TYPEWRITER

Charles Wertenbaker, who wrote "Boojum" and "Peter the Duck" reveals to me that he composed the latter novel in ten days flat. He adds that he sat himself down in the Saturday Evening Post office and wrote the last short story in a series within three hours. These feats of creative speed always leave me gasping, particularly when the work done is good. I am an inveterate slowpoke.

An afternoon paper contained a picture recently of Miss Eleanor Barry, current debutante, with a cigarette in her hand. This is the first time I have ever seen a society-page portrait of a girl smoking. Despite the researches of the fashioners, black and white remain the predominant motif of evening wear.

PEACOCK STRUT

Now that the immensely top-heavy Peacock ball at the Waldorf is enshrouded in Park avenue history, little undercurrents and side-sensations of the affair crop up. For example, the way the creme de la creme of the avenue dived for chairs in the ballroom before the show began, forgetting that their dizzy blue-bookishness carried the Alphonse-Gaston obligation. And the dowager telling a co-check girl about the famous folk in her family. And the way the women in the audience craned their necks back to get a glimpse of Mary Pickford and Doug Fairbanks in a box, forgetting the array of talent assembled to amuse them—stars from all the big hit shows and from the crest of the radio wave-lengths.

STIL VOUS PLAIT

The Lafayette is one of the few hotels in town with the old-time, intimate tavern touch. It is the gathering place, by the way, of the haut monde French of the town, many of the waiters speaking nothing but Francaise. One of its guests has been registered continuously for 22 years. Checked off the names mentioned in a popular New York column today and recognized only four out of 17. Wonder what people in other cities make of such a catalogue? The Daily News building, which goes up cheerily and stops, remains my favorite structure, especially on a bright, cold day. I see a paper in Louisiana signs this column "By Central Press Association." Well, if the credit (or discredit) must hang anywhere else, it might as well be on my collective bosom.

The beginnings of the whale fishery are obscure, but it appears that in the ninth century the Norwegians sent out vessels in pursuit of whales, perhaps even to Greenland.

WASHINGTON RUMORS SAY PRESIDENT THINKS JAPAN HAS RIGHT IN MANCHURIA

WASHINGTON.—Japan so manifestly is the aggressor power in Manchuria that the American public sympathy (judging from press comment and the utterances of recently-arrived members of congress, who presumably reflect sentiment throughout the country) evidently favors the Chinese in their clash with the invading islanders on the mainland north of the Great Wall. At the outbreak of the China-Japanese war in 1911, feeling on this side of the Pacific was just the other way.

Of the affair's merits Americans knew, indeed, nothing whatever. The thing that did attract their attention was the spectacle of a nation with approximately 40,000,000 population (at that time) boldly tackling 400,000,000. Naturally their hearts went out to the supposedly gallant minority.

The first actual engagement, to be sure, disclosed that, in point of fighting strength, the well-drilled, well-armed (for the 1890's) Japanese outclassed the practically unorganized, medievally-equipped mainlanders as a pack of wolves outclasses a flock of sheep—of no matter how many times the wolf pack's number.

Then of course it immediately was realized that the islanders would win in short order. When they did so it was not regarded that they had given a particularly convincing demonstration of their prowess, since it was apparent that they had had no competition worth mentioning.

Their victory over Russia in the war of 1904-05 was entirely a different matter. Military men everywhere recognized it as a brilliant performance, and it generally was conceded that Japan had emerged from the struggle as a world factor with which to be reckoned.

Whether rightly or not, there is no question that occidental diplomatic views Nippon as having suffered from a superiority complex from that day to the present—a dangerous cockiness; a profound confidence in Japanese ability to dominate eastern Asia (and maybe still more of Asia later) and a determination to do it, with other countries' acquiescence if they choose to acquiesce, but to do it anyway.

Until the Japanese began to exploit it, starting about 25 years ago, Manchuria, he is said to be well aware, was a bandit-ridden, thoroughly uncivilized region; today it is one of the most progressive areas in the Far East. Mr. Hoover is understood to deem the Japanese entitled to credit for this, and as he is (quoting rumors) they are entitled to protect their Manchurian investments and improvements.

If so, Washington's unwillingness to hamper the islanders' campaign, which so seriously disturbs the League of Nations, is accounted for—but rumor, it cannot be over-emphasized, is the explanation's sole foundation.

Russian armed interference with Japan's plans, in the judgment of competent American military experts, is not much to be feared. Army men say that Moscow could not now put, relatively, as formidable a body of troops in the eastern Asiatic field as the force under General Kuropatkin, which the Japanese comparatively are far stronger. While it is conceded at the war department that the Soviet prediction is made that threats are all it will employ until vastly better able to fight than at present.

The military forecast is that Japan simply will get Manchuria. If so, Washington's unwillingness to hamper the islanders' campaign, which so seriously disturbs the League of Nations, is accounted for—but rumor, it cannot be over-emphasized, is the explanation's sole foundation.

At any rate, all accounts agree that the Japanese continue to go straight ahead with their Manchurian program, the Chinese putting up the best resistance they can, but to no more effect than in the 1890's.

The League of Nations, having protested vehemently but vainly, turns imploringly to Washington to add America's voice to the protest. The state department, however, seems to have nothing to say on the subject. It is true, the United States is not a member of the League of Nations, but it was the prime inspiration of the Kellogg pact, which unmistakably was designed to cover precisely such cases as the existing one in Manchuria. Secretary of State Stimson himself so interpreted it a couple of years ago, when friction developed between the Chinese and Russia, and although Moscow snubbed him when he tried to intervene, nevertheless, he did try. Now he simply confers amiably with Japanese Ambassador Debuchi and the Kellogg pact is hardly even referred to.

If one seeks a reason for Washington's Manchurian policy, one must rely on pure rumor, for no official version is obtainable. Rumor, for whatever it may be worth, has it that President Hoover, who has lived in China and knows conditions there from personal observation, thinks Japan has a fairly good excuse for its Manchurian activities.

Don'ts In Righting Bad Posture

By LOGAN CLENDENINE, M. D.

"The rules and principles for acquiring and maintaining the proper mechanics of the body in its anatomic correct position are so few and so simple that they offer little excuse for neglect in this field. Emphasize—stand tall, head up, chin in, chest high, abdomen flat, weight on balls of feet.

"Never over-correct the chest, which tends to carry the shoulders too far back and to increase the low lumbar curve of the back, causing the body weight to fall on the heels.

"Always consider the body as a whole. Do not look only at a localized deformity because its causes and results are too far reaching, oftentimes working round in a vicious circle. Departure from the normal poise causes abnormal strain. It must be appreciated that while the chief effect of the strain may show most markedly in one part, nevertheless, the whole body under such circumstances must be affected." (From Thomas—"Body Mechanics and Health.")

This means that it is wrong to nag a child about any one feature of body posture. "Throw your shoulders back." "Don't droop." "Hold your head up." "Stand up straight." "Pull your stomach in." If only one thing is corrected it may mean that the correction will throw the body out of place in another and even more disadvantageous place.

Besides that the psychology of such nagging is all wrong. Children will respond readily to desire for correct carriage and posture if they are encouraged to believe that it will give them stronger muscles or that it will make them more beautiful and attractive. The first argument can be applied to the males and the second to the females.

Physical educators today are agreed that exercises for the arms and legs have been over-emphasized in the past. Far more important are exercises to produce good general bodily posture. They result in far more muscle strengthening than the mere arm and leg exercises.

It must be remembered that correct posture includes not only standing and walking positions, but also sitting and even lying positions. Rules and exercises for attaining these various ideals will be discussed tomorrow.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

J. B. C.: "Please give a list of books which give information to a woman about to be married."

Answer: There is not a single book of this sort that I can wholeheartedly recommend. Most of them suffer either from the defect of too much reticence and modesty and vagueness of statement or from the violent overstatement and explicitness of instruction which tends to frighten the candidate nearly to death. Probably the best, although it belongs in the latter class and its statements should not be taken too literally, is "Ideal Marriage," published by Covici-Friede company, New York.

Wife Wants Hubby Back

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"MY DEAR MISS LEE: My husband has left me because of my uncontrollable temper. He said something to me and I got angry.

"I know where I could get in touch with him. As we are both very proud I do not think he will be willing to forgive me.

"Please tell me how to go about getting him back. I need him very much, Virginia, as I have two children, twins, a boy and a girl.

"My husband is 30, very hot tempered and proud. I am 27, also hot tempered and proud.

"I wrote to him once before, Miss Lee. Why didn't you answer?"

"HURT PRIDE."

Two hot tempered proud people make a highly inflammable combination, Hurt Pride. On the other hand, each should be able easily to forgive the other's temper tantrums as they know the temptation to "fly off the handle."

If you know where your husband is why not write and ask him to forgive you? If you are willing to humble your pride and ask forgiveness, surely he can do the same and forgive your fault. If he will not, the law can compel him to support you and the children.

Before you consult a lawyer, however, do everything in your power to effect a reconciliation. Tell him you will try hard to control your temper and ask him to help you. Ask him also to help you keep the home together and make it a peaceful and happy place for the babies. You can aid one another, and if you both err occasionally, forget about being "proud," which is nothing to boast of, you know, and say you are sorry and make up.

I am sorry that I did not answer you before, I try to answer as many letters as I possibly can. Occasionally one goes astray, but usually there are so many that I have to answer the most pressing problems first, and some necessarily get shoved aside. Sorry.

HEARTBROKEN SUE: If you can forget the boy, maybe it would be better. Sue. Too bad you love him. Or maybe if you keep on going with him you'll win him over.

"DEAR MISS LEE: Will you print this letter in your column for the benefit of your correspondent who called himself 'Young Experience.' He certainly has the right idea about women of today.

"I have been married and have a child—I am 25. Women do go to extremes with this so-called freedom. I believe a woman should be a pal to her husband and help him to get ahead, but it seems to me when a man has a wife who is willing to help and sacrifice, he is looking for the butterfly. I don't want to appear hard but it makes one rather hard when the love and help of your youth has been discarded when the man reaches the top.

"I like to have a good time as well as the next one, but I don't think one need dull their brain with gin and become vulgar in order to enjoy oneself. My friends call me old-fashioned, but I don't care. I want my son to be proud of his mother when he grows up, and I think I'll win out in the end.

"JUST A WOMAN."

Of course I think you are right, and I hope your boy will always appreciate his mother.

H. IRENE: If you don't love the boy well enough to marry him, don't marry him, Irene. You are young and can surely wait awhile. You certainly should be free to have girl friends. Every girl needs pals of her own sex.

But let me warn you of something: Don't break up with this boy who is so good to you and then decide that you love him dearly and can't be happy without him. Girls sometimes do that, thinking they don't love the boy friend, and then come walking to me—on paper—admittedly, they find out later that they do love him after all.

THE FIRST AMATEUR TURRET TELESCOPE

The most remarkable amateur telescope in the world is just being finished at Wyomissing, Pa., by J. Milo Webster. It is called a "turret refractor." The turret resembles a Chinese parasol opened, in shape; the turret rotates, resting on the umbrella-eaves, on an iron circle attached to a rigid wooden base.

When the umbrella handle would go through the open umbrella is accurate north, while the iron circle is parallel with the plane of the equator of the earth (equatorially mounted). The telescope is a refractor; part of the tube is inside the turret. The tube has an elbow (a right angle) outside the turret. At the end beyond the elbow is the five-inch object glass. The eyepiece mirror inside the elbow brings the stellar image to the eyepiece.

Buccaneers Exercise Jinx Over Home Team

GARNER FIFTH WIN FROM CADETS BY 19 TO 0 SCORE UNDER LIGHTS

Central Exhibits Real Offense While Keeping Enemy From Threatening; Coach Wilson Uses Many Substitutes

By PHIL FRANE

XENIA CENTRAL'S annual football jinx over the O. S. and S. O. Home was resurrected, examined, found to be still in good working order, and exercised for the fifth time at Cox Field Friday night. Strangely enough, the margin of victory, 19 to 0, was identically the same as last year.

Whether the Buccaneers sacrificed a few burnt-offerings of brand-new footballs to the gods controlling their gridiron destinies is not generally known; no odor of incense was detected by even the most whimsical spectators, and the only spectacle visible to the naked eye was the very non-mystical one of Xenia battering into submission a fighting cadet eleven that put up a stiff but futile argument in all four periods.

There is a growing suspicion that Xenia football teams always point for the yearly domestic contest with the Home. The Bucs may have previously lost five successive games this season, but they were equal to the annual assignment of preserving a tradition which specifies that a Home grid team shall not defeat, neither shall it score upon a Central High eleven.

It is highly probable the score would have been somewhat larger had Coach "Pinky" Wilson not decided to give all his boys a holiday on the twenty-fifth day of the month. Every available member of the squad saw action, and there was a monotonous stream of Buccaneers trotting on and off the field during the last three quarters.

Dazzling runs by Freddie Dalton, Tom Huston, Paul Baldwin and Howard Thompson, aided and abetted by aggressive play on the part of the Xenia line constituted the high points in the triumph.

The Bucs crossed the goal line once in each period except the third. Taking the ball on their own forty-yard mark early in the first quarter, Xenia gridders staged an uninterrupted march of sixty yards for their first touchdown. A succession of line thrusts, including a brilliant sweep around end by Dalton, and a twenty-five yard dash by Huston, eventually brought the ball to within a yard of the goal and Dalton hurled himself across the goal line.

Just as soon as they got possession of the ball again after the cadets were forced to kick, the Bucs launched another successful drive from their own forty-four yard line. Dalton, who had been substituted for a first down before the quarter ended, then Freddie broke through and scampered twenty-eight yards to the Home eighteen.

Huston skirted end for fifteen more and Thompson plunged the last three yards for a second touchdown. Dalton, to the amazement of onlookers, converted the extra point on a peculiarly-executed drop-kick, or maybe it just looked peculiar.

After this score, most of the Xenia regulars departed from the game in the wake of a deluge of substitutes and the cadets began throwing passes. Yowell tossed one to Wooten for fifteen yards and another to Blair for six, putting the ball on Xenia's forty-one, the farthest the Home ever got on offense. Yowell was thrown for a loss of twelve yards, and although he retrieved six yards on another aerial to Blair, a punt was necessary. Shortly afterward, Huston got loose for thirty-five yards around end and a fifteen-yard dash by Creamer advanced the Bucs to the Home eight-yard stripe. The Bucs drew a five-yard penalty for offside, Creamer gained two and Huston was stopped three yards from the goal after a nine-yard gain, but the next two plays lost six yards and the cadets took the ball on downs, the half ending soon afterward.

The third period was uneventful, but with the reentry of Dalton into the game early in the fourth quarter after an absence of almost two periods, business began to pick up once more for Xenia. Freddie tried to display his drop-kicking ability from the three-yard mark but he juggled the pass from center long enough to permit a deluge of cadet gridders to block the effort at a field goal.

Later, however, Xenia drove forty yards for its final touchdown. Huston picked up five and Dalton six then Thompson sprinted twenty-three yards to the three-yard mark, from where Dalton scored on the second play. Thompson's second place-kicking attempt was frustrated, as was his first, for extra point.

Xenia registered thirteen first downs by way of celebrating the fact it was "Friday the 13th," while the cadets recorded five. The Home completed four out of eight passes for thirty-four yards. The Bucs may have tried one pass.

- (3) Ma Chan-Shan to promise not to interfere with the operation of Taonan Railway.
- (4) The Japanese to retire to Taonan as soon as the terms are carried out.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 14—A Japanese force of 1800 men, equipped with heavy artillery, crossed the Nonni River today and launched an attack upon the Hellingkiang army of General Ma Chan-Shan, according to dispatches reaching here from Manchuria.

At the same time, a Chinese army of 9000 men under General Chang Hai-Peng was reported to be attacking the Hellingkiang troops west of Taising.

Ma Chan-Shan, defending Anganki and Tsitsihar, had 20,000 men ready to meet the Japanese advance, the dispatches said.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Tommy Loughran whipped Paulino Uzcudun, the grinning Basque, teetering on one pin.

Loughran, in over-reaching himself to counter, while backed near the ropes in the fifth round, slipped to one knee and twisted his right ankle.

Then Madison Square Garden fans saw the unbelievable in boxing. Loughran went on from that point to gain the decision, scoring his thirteenth straight victory on Friday the 13th.

Hayes dropped Captain Harold Ward, of Bucyrus, the team's quarterback; Desmond Griffin, end, from Sharon, Pa., and Ed Heldman, center of Marietta. The coach did not state the nature of the infractions.

KNUTE ROCKNE MEMORIAL DAY RITES CENTER AT BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14.—This was Knute Rockne Memorial Day throughout the land with national ceremonies centered in the huge auditorium here, where the midshipmen from Annapolis were to meet football warriors from Notre Dame, the college which Knute piloted to gridiron glory.

The most concentrated drive to complete the $1,000,000 fund to build a perpetual memorial to the "Rock" was entrusted to 6,000 Boy Scouts who will solicit donations from a crowd estimated at 63,000.

The farewell to Rockne will come between halves. Bands will play "carry on for Rockne," a song written especially for the occasion and at conclusion, a bugle will sound taps for the man who has gone yet remains vivid and as fragrant as evergreen in the memory of football legends.

The meeting between Nat and Notre Dame thus was transformed from a gala occasion, where riotous enthusiasm ran amuck, to a gathering where pathos was the real chord struck and where the stress of concentration was on a hero who moulders in the dust, rather than the heroic alive and vigorous and in the prime of youth.

As a game, it promised to be little more than a snappy work-out for the great team from South Bend.

The westerners came here with a squad numbering about thirty-five. And the slogan was "no mercy for the Navy." "Hunk" Anderson, successor to Rockne, announced that he would start his first team against the Midwestern. His plan seems for the regulars to knock Navy lopsided in the first half and then permit the subs to finish up the annihilation.

Coach Edgar Miller, of the Navy, wasn't very voluble in the matter of statements. All he would say was:

"My boys will toss all they have into the effort to win."

The game was one of those betwixt things, nobody wanted Navy at any price to win. Some Notre Dame enthusiasts offered to wager even money that their prizes would win by twenty or more points. No takers. And so the duel of the afternoon promised to provide for the crowd only the chance to pay a final tribute to Rockne and then a sight of the Notre Dame machine rolling over the Navy machine.

President G. H. Jones has announced that Mr. Nat Young, former president of Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo., will deliver a series of lectures to the student body on the trend of modern education. The dates for the lectures will be announced later.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Murphy of Centerville, Ohio spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith. Wufang Ward of Cincinnati called on his friends Friday. Mr. Ward was one of the stars on the football team in 1924-25 and played full back and half back.

Preparations are in course for celebrating homecoming on the twenty-first. The students were given an opportunity to select the Homecoming Queen Wednesday. Quite a rivalry was brought about by the fraternities and sororities, each putting forth individual efforts to bring about the selection of their favorite.

Miss Orchid Ramsey, of the Gamma Kappa Phi Society, received 172 votes and won the honors as queen. Miss Mattie P. Huntley, Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, received 132 votes. Miss Elizabeth Bower, Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, eighty-three votes and Miss Congeniality Herman, Amaze Girls' Club, twenty-nine votes. The main attraction for the homecoming celebration is the football game between the home team and Lincoln University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. B. L. Strady, university examiner from Ohio State University visited the institution Thursday. He had luncheon at President G. H. Jones' residence, Clifton Road, at one o'clock.

Wesley Dean McGinnis, of the College of Liberal Arts and Mr. J. N. Newsome, assistant to the Superintendent of the C. N. and I. Department. At five o'clock dinner was served in the Home Economics Bldg. Those present were President and Mrs. G. H. Jones, Dean and Mrs. F. A. McGinnis, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Newsome, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Valentine, Dr. B. L. Strady and Attorney and Mrs. W. Idings of Dayton. A large number of guests were present.

Idings in charge of requests to the university and will make a report in regards to the bequest of the late Judge Dustin of Dayton.

Mr. Dwight V. Kyle gave an outline of the aims and purposes of the National Negro Achievement Week as sponsored by Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. Upsilon Chapter, located at Wilberforce is doing her bit to put the program across. The speaker for Wednesday morning chapel services was W. T. W. T. Club, one of the instructors in the department of English, who spoke on the Negro in literature and art. He gave a short sketch of Negro writers and mentioned the names of Charles Chestnut, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Jean Toomer, Walter White, Nella Larsen, Langston Hughes, Countee Cullen, Claude Mckaye and Rudolph Fisher. He mentioned their particular style of writing and the opinions given by book reviewers in America and Europe Friday morning.

Professor M. L. Kleser of the department of economics, gave a brief outline of the "Negro in Business." Sunday evening a program will be offered in Galloway Hall at 7:30. Attorney John W. Love of Bluefield, W. Va., will be the principal speaker.

"The best things in life are free," sings the troubador. This must be true for "The Conquest of the Cross," a religious morality play presented by the T. W. T. Club to the student body and faculty members on Wednesday Night. It was the best student entertainment given this school year. The play was given under the supervision of Miss Avis Hatcher, a junior in the Commercial Department.

Ben Spence of Toronto, Canada, delivered an address on the "Canadian Liquor Traffic" Monday morning at chapel service. Spence is a member of the staff of the Toronto Star and for a number of years was a member of the Press Club of the United States senate. He has traveled extensively and studied the social and political questions in Europe. He is employed by the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association and delivers lectures to colleges on the liquor traffic in the United States.

GREAT GRID TEAMS OF THE PAST

BY BILL RITT

NO.3—MICHIGAN'S MIGHT—1902
Michigan's shining football saga is studied with the chronicles of great, unbeaten elevens, with the names of such immortals as Jack Blott, Franklin Cappon, Harry Kipke, Edith Slaughter, Irwin Uteritz, Bo Moldena, Benny Friedman and Benny Oosterbaan—but it is doubtful that any Michigan team is dearer to Michigan memories than the great wrecking crew of 1902.

In 1902 Fighting H. Yost had his second "point-a-minute" eleven. It was really still his first as Willie Heston, Ross Weeks, Dan McLaughlin, Gregory, Hornstein, Redden and Sweeley also played regularly with the 1901 unbeaten team.

Yost had five "point-a-minute" elevens in a row, all unbeaten save the 1905 aggregation which lost its final game to Chicago by a safety. The 1902 team was the second, but it rolled up the biggest total score—644 points—and showed the greatest power, murdering eight major league elevens in a schedule of eleven games.

Brightest star in Yost's 1902 galaxy was Willie Heston who, with a year's experience behind him, reached his peak that season though he did not receive All-American mention until later.

That 1902 team had everything—speed, power, brains and experience and a great coach who was coming into his own at last. So sure was this great outfit that it would win, regardless of opposition, that its greatest pride was in keeping its own goal line unmarked. When M. A. C. the upstart, and Minnesota scored, the Wolverines were as blue about it as if they had been beaten!

The team was great in every position, but its spearhead of attack was Heston, who possessed the two best pair of football legs up to Red Grange's time. Heston started like a flash and when tackled his leg drive yanked the hapless tackler along until his grip broke and away went Willie.

Strangely enough Hornstein, who started at end, and Sweeley, who shone as a back on 1901's magnificent team, switched jobs for 1902. Ask old "Hurry Up" Yost why, today, and he'll answer: "Oh, I figured the boys would become bored so I shuffled 'em up a bit."

In early Indian summer the 1902 Maize and Blue thunderbolt struck Albion to open the season. Albion crumpled, 38-0. Case school, in Cleveland, fell next, 48-0. In the final warm-up game against the Michigan Argies Yost let fly with both barrels—to see that his club could really do. He saw something—the Wolves winning, 19-6.

Indiana, the first Western conference foe, fell 60-0. Notre Dame (Knute Rockne then was a school boy peering at his first Chicago high school football games through fence knotholes) dropped, 23-0. Ohio State collapsed before the Michigan might—36-0.

Whomsoever fought savagely. It was a wild battle from which the Wolverines emerged a scant 6-0.

"Africa Speaks," said to be the strangest picture ever med, which has attracted a lot of applause for Columbia ce it has been exhibited, comes to the Orphium Sunday Monday.

It is a celluloid record of a jungle venture through the heart of Africa, during which the camera counters some of the strangest ope in the world. Many are miliar with pictures of the discop Ubangi women, who insert cs behind their lips when young to know that Virginia Lee Corbin, one-time child star, now grown tall, blonde and beautiful, plays opposite the big horse and gun man.

Add to life's tragedies of the theater world: Myra St. Maur, former Shakespearean actress, was found dead in her barren, six-room apartment in New York yesterday. The body was guarded by eleven hungry dogs. Neighbors said the woman had received notice of eviction recently. There was no food in the house. On the lone chair in her room was a pile of wax. Her last candle had burned out. And, Norma Phillips, known as the "mutual girl", a star of seventeen years ago, died Thursday in New York, unknown and broke. Her last appearance was in the road production of "Five Star Final", which she left three weeks ago in Boston because of illness.

These and other strange creatures of a backward civilization in the dark continent, become movie actors and actresses for the unusual film, said to be the truest picture of Africa ever portrayed.

Tuesday will be bargain day at the Orphium, there being two feature offerings. "First Aid", a motion picture story of the American ambulance surgeon and "Larids and Six Shooters", a Western featuring Jack Perrin, are on the double bill.

"First Aid" features Grant Withers and Marjorie Beebe with Wheeler Oakman, Donald Keith, William Desmond, Paul Panzer and others in the cast.

An old favorite, Bert Lytel, not seen here for some time, is at the Orphium Wednesday and Thursday in "Brothers", a Columbia production of the stage play by Herbert Ashton, Jr. Lytel does the unusual feat (for these talkies) of portraying a dual role in this picture. Dorothy Sebastian and others are in the cast.

To make this a complete Columbia week, Tim McCoy winds up the program Friday and Saturday with a horse opera called "Shotgun Pass." You may be interested

Lois Corbin, a pretty working girl falls in love with Bruce Durand, the nephew of Charles Durand, one of Chicago's wealthiest men. Ashamed to have Bruce know where she lives, Lois leaves her family and goes to share an apartment with Margaret and Arlene, two of her girl friends. Arlene falls in love with Bruce herself, and sets about to get him. She tells him that Lois has gone out with another man one night when Bruce calls for her, when in reality she has gone to a movie because Arlene told her that Bruce could not come down that night. Bruce is driven by jealousy to fall deliberately into the trap Arlene has set for him. Lois sends her engagement ring back to him and moves into a little room down on Rush street so that she will not have to live with Arlene. Lois gets unbearably lonely there, and finally swallows her pride and goes back to her home. Her mother is elated because she has come back to live with them, and even Lois is glad to be there once more. She realizes that this is her place, after all. Mr. and Mrs. Durand have heard that their nephew has announced his intention to marry a girl who is not in the social register, and Mrs. Durand insists that they return at once to America and settle Bruce so that he will not do anything foolish. Bruce is sorry that he has made a second date with Arlene, because he can't think about anyone else except Lois. However, he goes for her, and on the way to the club they pass his home. Arlene insists on going inside, and Bruce decides that this is as good as any other way that he knows of to kill time. Bruce is obviously bored with Arlene, but she is having a good time. He plays the radio, and they make an attempt at conversation. Bruce finally suggests that they leave, and as he helps Arlene on with her coat she puts her lips up and kisses him. At that same moment he is aware that someone is watching them. Mr. and Mrs. Durand have chosen this moment to enter their home. Mrs. Durand believes this is the girl in whom Bruce is interested, and immediately demands an explanation. Mr. Durand insists on them waiting to talk to Bruce when he returns home that evening. When he takes Arlene into her apartment Margaret is still sitting up reading. He asks her where Lois is and Margaret tells him that Lois doesn't live there any longer. Arlene walks into the dressing room and closes the door.

CHAPTER 30

BRUCE LOOKED at Margaret as though he thought she was not telling the truth. "But I thought she lived here," he said, slowly. "I mean, I thought she was out, but that she stayed here just the same." Margaret began to see through things now. She cast a sidelong glance toward the dressing room. "Oh, no," she said, loudly enough for Arlene to hear. "I thought Arlene had probably told you that Lois had left us. A couple of weeks ago."

Bruce wrinkled up his brow. "A couple of weeks ago?" But Arlene—"It began to dawn on him, too, now. At first he was tempted to call Arlene out of the dressing room and have it out with her then and there, tell her what he thought of her once and for all, but then he decided that he had been through enough scenes for one evening. Better to just let it drop altogether."

"No," he explained to Margaret. "I didn't know Lois had moved. All I knew was that she was out every night with Mack."

"Mack who?" Margaret asked, bluntly.

"I don't know his last name," Bruce said, lamely.

Margaret looked at him disgustingly.

"No," she said, shortly, "and no body else does, either."

At that the door to the dressing room slammed loudly.

"It seems to me you've been pretty dumb for a few weeks who has been to college and all that," Margaret went on, glibly. "But then, of course, it's none of my business."

Bruce sat with his head down. "You're right, at that, Margaret. I'm plenty dumb. You have to throw a bomb at me to wake me up, I guess. Well—"

He rose.

"Well," Margaret said, "it seems to me that you two have just about done all that you could to each other without cutting each other's throats. If I were you I'd get on my knees, if it were necessary."

"I'm perfectly willing," Bruce assented. "I've never spent a more miserable two weeks in all my life. But I thought, you see—"

"Yes, I see," Margaret interrupted, as he hesitated miserably. "But that's all ancient history now."

"Do you think Lois will forgive me?" It was almost sorry for him. He had such a tragic look on his face. It seemed funny, too, since she had seen Lois moping around for days. Bruce's question could be easily answered. Margaret didn't tell him though, what he wished to hear.

"I certainly wouldn't blame her if she didn't forgive you," Margaret retorted.

Bruce nodded. "Where is she? Is she living alone?"

Margaret wasn't just sure what she should say about that. She wasn't sure that Lois wanted Bruce to know where she lived. Margaret couldn't see Lois' idea any longer. Not when Bruce was as crazy about Lois as he apparently was. He wouldn't care where she lived now. But she thought she had better wait and consult Lois before she gave out any information as to her whereabouts. After all, it was Lois' business of she didn't want Bruce to know where she lived.

Arlene evidently had had her ear to the keyhole listening to the entire conversation, for she emerged now with information to give away.

"Lois lives at 612 Fulton street," she announced.

Bruce looked up quickly. He was seized with a desire to slap Arlene's face. He desired to do something to her. He couldn't help having that feeling, after all she had done to Lois and him.

"Thanks," he said dryly. "If you'd given me that information a little earlier it certainly would have been appreciated."

"Sorry, old dear," Arlene said, "just didn't happen to be in the mood until now."

Bruce ignored her and said good-night to Margaret.

"If I don't get hold of Lois tonight," he glared hastily at his wrist watch. "It's pretty late, you see, why, tell her that I'll call her in the morning."

Margaret said "O. K." and walked to the door with him.

"Well," Margaret began, after Bruce had gone, "I was right, then. I had an idea that you were at the bottom of this, Arlene."

Arlene smiled sarcastically.

"Oh, yeah?" she said, smartly.

"Well, what difference does it make to you?"

Margaret turned to her.

"It makes a lot of difference. I never used to care so much, because I never knew any of the girls that you cheated, but I know Lois and I like her. I know what all this has put her through and it makes me sore."

Arlene realized that Margaret was her best girl friend; in fact, her only girl friend, and she didn't intend losing her.

"Well, it really wasn't all my fault," she tried to explain. "Bruce called—"

Margaret interrupted her. "I don't care to hear anything more about it, Arlene. I'd be ashamed if I were you. If I couldn't get my own dates without going after the fellow that some other girl had, I think I'd go without."

Margaret flounced into the dressing room and started to get ready for bed. Her slippers fell with a thud on the floor. "You had a lot of nerve, too, telling Bruce where Lois lives."

Arlene whined, "Well, he asked, didn't he? He wanted to know."

"Yeah. He wanted to know a lot of things, too, I guess. But you didn't find it so easy to tell him the truth about those things."

Arlene went over and put her arm around Margaret. "I'll admit I'm wrong," she began, a hint of tears in her voice, "but, please don't feel bad toward me, Margaret. You're the only friend I've got."

Margaret walked out of the dressing room and pulled the bed down with a loud bang.

"You won't have me, either if you're going to pull any more stunts such as this one. I can tell you that."

Arlene was whimpering. "I didn't know it would cause so much trouble. Honestly I didn't. It really just started out in fun."

Margaret jumped into bed. She was happy tonight. In the morning she could see Lois change the long face she had been wearing lately into one of smiles.

POOR FUNDS NOT FOR DOG WARSAW, Ind.—A man receiving county poor relief here has been discovered to have been buying a quart of milk daily for his dog. Trustee Harvey McCleary learned of this use of Wayne Township funds. Seventeen township trustees then met and voted that "worthy poor" is not to be construed in Kosciusko County to include dogs or the car which may be an important part of the family. The trustees entered into an agreement not to advance any relief to persons owning dogs or automobiles.

DIVORCE SOUGHT BY WIFE; COURT NEWS

Declaring that she left her husband September 8, 1925, being unable to endure his cruel treatment any longer, Ella Smith has brought suit in Common Pleas Court seeking a divorce from Samuel Smith on grounds of gross neglect of duty and wilful absence from home for more than three years. They were married in Dayton in January, 1924, no children being born of the union. The plaintiff asks restoration to her maiden name of Grady.

AFRICA SPEAKS

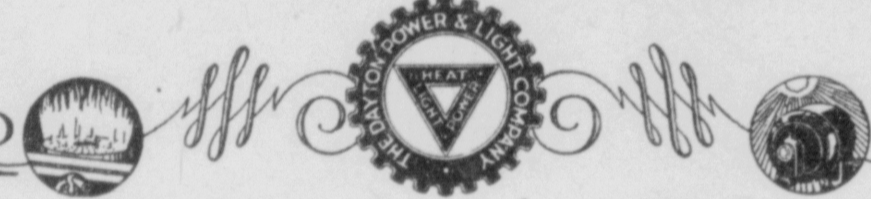

The Strangest Romance Ever Filmed!

Filmed by Paul A. Hoeffer and Walter A. Foster on the Colorado-African Expedition

From moroccos on the indian ocean to Lagos on the Atlantic the path of the story stretches—across the black throbbing heart of the untouched Congo. Weird customs, wild dances—age-old rituals of worship to the gods of fertility, of love—flame in the background, accenting the panorama of cruelty, sensuality and amazing feats of heroism.

Also good 2-reel comedy, Pathe News and Football with Knute Rockne.

How does

The DAYTON POWER & LIGHT Co. SERVE THIS COMMUNITY

We furnish a Natural Gas and Electric Service that is as efficient as modern methods and machines can provide. It is as nearly "foolproof" as any service can be. It is designed to serve this community well, and to increase its facilities well in advance of actual needs, so that abundant supplies of these essential services will always be available.

Through prompt payment of taxes on property holdings in this community and county, The Dayton Power and Light Company joins you in supporting your civic enterprises.

We provide certain and profitable employment in our organization for members of this community . . . your neighbors.

Can any lone organization make more contributions to your prosperity and progress?

When you think of SERVICE, think of
